- Firsthand information on the newly launched Taobao Australian E-trade Channel and the e-exporting opportunities for Australian businesses
- Successful case studies and practical guide on how to operate online stores on Taobao and Tmall
- Networking opportunity with over 300 Australian entrepreneurs and Chinese e-commerce service providers;
- Preview of latest smart hardware products showcased by China's dominant digital companies.

IDSC 2014 – China E-commerce Conference

China is currently experiencing huge growth in e-commerce. The country's total e-commerce users reached 300 million in 2013, which counted half of China's total online population. It is estimated that e-commerce in China will be worth US$540 billion by 2015, and by 2020 worth more than e-commerce in the U.S., the UK, Japan, Germany and France combined. This has offered a new choice for overseas enterprises to expand into Chinese market more quickly with a reduced cost.

The rapid growth of China's e-commerce has brought great opportunities for overseas businesses, especially for the F&B sector, as imported food and agriculture products are in increasing demand in China. Over half of the Chinese consumers reported a loss of confidence in domestic foods, and over one-quarter said they would buy more imported foods to replace domestic products. This certainly is good news for Australia, a country reputable for its quality food.

Speakers from China's leading e-commerce service providers including Alibaba, Taobao, Alipay and Sinotrans, are going to cover the most popular and relevant topics at IDSC 2014 China E-commerce Session, including platforms, payment gateways, logistic solutions, O2O trend and e-commerce marketing. Through speeches, case studies and discussions, it offers delegates a comprehensive understanding of China's e-commerce market as well as practical knowledge on how to grab this huge opportunity. IDSC 2014 China E-commerce Conference will also announce the launch of Taobao Australian E-trade Channel, a centralized platform established by China's largest online marketplace Taobao to source authentic Australian products and sell to Chinese individual consumers. The new platform will offer a cost-effective solution for Australian exporters to expand into China market.

The Conference provides a unique opportunity for delegates to connect with Chinese e-commerce solution providers as well as businesses with a same China focus. Delegates will also have the chance to network with a group of digital practitioners from China during breaks and be inspired by some of China's latest smart hardware products.

IDSC 2014 – China Smart Hardware Round Table

Chinese smart hardware industry experienced viral growth in 2013, while a spate of new smart hardware mushroomed and both internet giants and startups swarmed into the sector. As a consequence, China's smart hardware industry has become the established production base of the world, based on multiple authoritative analysis reports. Development has been focused on mobile phone, embedded system and so on in recent years, which drives demand as well as innovation.

IDSC 2014 China Smart Hardware Round Table brings a group of guests from some of China's dominant technology companies, including Xiaomi, Baidu and TCL, to share insights on China's growing smart hardware sector which has been drawing much attention in recent years. The Round Table is designed to facilitate communications and exchange of ideas between Australian and Chinese smart hardware developers and manufacturers.

The Round Table is exclusive to selected guests and by invitation only. However, all the delegates at IDSC 2014 will have the opportunity to review the latest smart products displayed by Chinese smart hardware makers.
